presents

Gender and Reproductive Justice for People Living with HIV

A conversation with

Deborah Mindry

Research Anthropologist, UCLA
Intercollegiate Feminist Center Visiting Scholar

Tuesday, April 25, 2017, 12:00 p.m.
Vita Nova Conference Room, Scripps College

Lunch will be provided.

Deborah Mindry discusses her work on reproductive justice for people living with HIV sharing her thoughts and experiences regarding the marginalization of men in sexual and reproductive care services. Global efforts to reduce HIV transmission increasingly focus on women and children with men being drawn in only as partners to support positive outcomes for women and children. Should men be included in sexual reproductive care as clients themselves? How could this be achieved while ensuring support and safe spaces for women in care? What would it take to create gender inclusive sexual reproductive health services?

This event is open to the public. Lunch will be provided. Please RSVP by Friday, April 21 to ifc@scrippscollege.edu.
